MONTESSORI

Nienhuis Montessori. The Global Standard.

Each child is special. Each child is unique. Children can develop without pre-determined rules, but they need individual guidance and educational materials that encourage and promote this development. We believe in personal growth and offer the necessary tools to support this. Our material meets the demands made by Maria Montessori's educational method regarding spontaneous learning. The high quality of the Nienhuis Montessori products provides children with the tools they need to become independent and critical thinkers.

Concentration And Fun.

Nienhuis Montessori materials harness a child's natural interest in a subject. The fact that the focus of each Montessori exercise is on one educational concept means that children are able to work independently and check their own work. The use of colors and shapes helps children concentrate and makes learning fun. They work individually and in a natural and stress-free environment.

Commitment And Passion.

A specially trained teacher guides the children in such a way that they learn to work independently and with a specific aim. This teacher creates a 'prepared environment' – whereby the educational materials are available to the children in a specifically structured way. This can only be achieved using materials created by skilled individuals and based on a rich tradition. Children across the globe choose Nienhuis Montessori materials for a reason.

Montessori Education

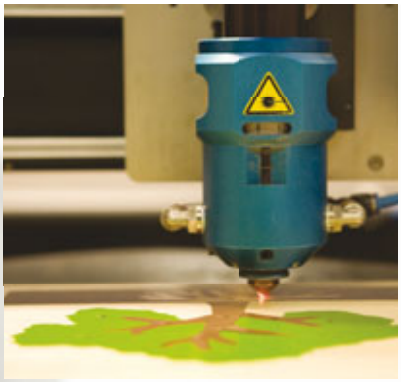

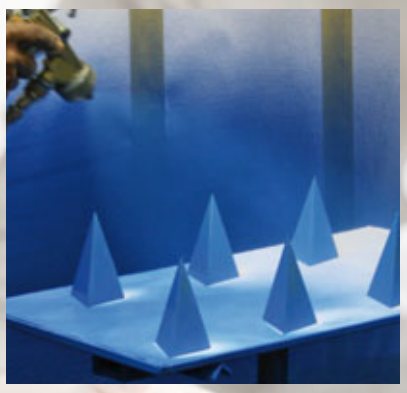

Maria Montessori believed that children learn best when they are very interested in a subject. Their natural curiosity drives them to make their own way. The Nienhuis Montessori materials are based on the Montessori education method and they stimulate the child's desire to learn. They promote imagination, increase insight, and create a desire for quality. They inspire children to search for something special. We believe in a child's strengths. It's up to them to discover their individual talents. Together with us.

Nienhuis – Now And Then

On The Connections With Maria Montessori And AMI

After the establishment of the first Casa dei Bambini in Rome, 1907, the news of the miracle children was quick to spread to Italy's neighbouring countries, and the rest of world. Interest in this new form of education spread to the Netherlands, and a few Dutch early childhood educators set off for Rome to study at the international teacher training courses that Maria Montessori started in 1913.

In 1914, the first group of Dutch children gathered in the home of Mrs. J.J. Werker in The Hague, who had set up a small Montessori 'Casa dei Bambini'. Soon afterwards, few other schools opened their doors in other parts of the country. With Montessori education increasingly finding groups of parents interested to have their children enjoy this new type of education, it was desirable to pool resources and knowledge, and coordinate the necessary lobbying with educational authorities: these considerations led, in 1917, to the foundation of an official Dutch Montessori Society, to become a resource for Dutch Montessorians and to liaise with Maria Montessori.

As ever, the demand for and availability of good quality materials made in accordance with the scientific specifications required by Maria Montessori was a prime concern: a special materials committee took it upon itself to have the Montessori materials made in country, as it was not always easy to import the materials from England or Italy. The Dutch Society established a Leermiddelenhuis (didactic apparatus centre), which by 1922 was fully operational. In 1923, when Maria Montessori gave a teacher training course in Amsterdam she gave extensive feedback on how the materials had been produced, and she discussed alternative colours for certain materials. In 1922, the Leermiddelenhuis was granted a special contract by Maria Montessori allowing them to produce materials "with a blessing" - a contract which was renewed ten years later. ▶

Nienhuis – Now And Then

On The Connections With Maria Montessori And AMI

Around 1926 a carpenter named Albert Nienhuis joined the Leermiddelen company. He was experienced in making small wooden objects, and was asked to assist with the Montessori materials. He first created the abacus, then The Geometric Cabinet and progressed on to more intricate materials such as the 1000 cube. As business grew, Mr Nienhuis' two sons also joined the company.

In 1929, Maria Montessori herself took the initiative to create the Association Montessori Internationale (AMI). She wished to have the full support of a strong and dynamic organisation that could respond to the growing interest in Montessori education worldwide; an organisation that was excellently positioned to further a full understanding of her ideas, to coordinate the publication of her writings, and license the manufacture of the carefully crafted developmental materials.

During the Second World War, when most goods were in short supply, Albert Nienhuis proved to be exceedingly resourceful in finding the necessary 'raw materials' that allowed him to continue production of the Montessori 'apparatus'. In 1945, after the war, the showroom of materials was moved to the Nienhuis family home in The Hague — and from that time the manufacture and sales were managed by the same company. As the demand for materials grew, the company found itself short of the necessary space and eventually, it was decided to relocate to the small town of Zelhem, in the East of the Netherlands. There it evolved into a truly international manufacturer of Montessori materials, making the materials according to the blueprints as specified, first by Maria Montessori and Mario Montessori, and later by the AMI Materials Committee to which the Montessoris' had delegated the responsibility of liaising with Nienhuis.

Over the years, AMI and Nienhuis, which almost share their "date of birth", have grown together and both have become household names in the Montessori world.

Montessori education has a firm foundation in many countries in the world, with new countries and communities expressing interest and finding their way to AMI and Nienhuis. This global appeal means that Montessori schools, educators and manufacturers have evolved into a large worldwide network.

Today, Nienhuis and AMI are working closely together to forge an innovative strategic partnership in order to create new opportunities for children from all cultures and socio-economic backgrounds to experience the Montessori educational approach.

They are doing this following AMI's three strategic pillars, which are:

LEGACY – The Study of Childhood — articulating Montessori philosophy and practice clearly in order to meet the needs of children and influence educational paradigms in a rapidly changing world through the support and dissemination of research on the development of children and young people.

CAPACITY – Montessori Education for All Children – serving more children around the world by increasing access to AMI training, supporting professional development of Montessori teachers and providing comprehensive support systems for Montessori schools across all sectors.

OUTREACH – Montessori Education for Social Change - promoting 'out of the box' sustainable initiatives to reach communities in vulnerable and at-risk situations, and additionally to promote the rights of children and young people throughout the world.

In this context, AMI and Nienhuis hope that by creating a dynamic relationship more resources will be mobilised in support of children who are, in the words of AMI's mission statement "the transforming elements of society leading to a harmonious and peaceful world".

Infant / Toddler

Continuing efforts at Nienhuis Montessori have produced an important extension to our spectrum of materials. Extensive research and consulting with experts in the Infant / Toddler field has resulted in a unique line of Infant / Toddler Montessori materials. We continually are expanding this line with new, innovative, specialized products that perfectly suit the Infant / Toddler community.

Each new human being, from conception to maturity, forms himself or herself, taking from the environment (the womb, the home, the community) the materials for self-construction. In the first two months of life, the infant, having moved from the comfort of the womb, learns to trust the new outside world. During the rest of the first year of life, infants learn to trust in themselves: 'I can do; I am able.' In the next two years, they confirm that they are able to act in the world: 'I am worthwhile; I can contribute.' The overall goal, one that overshadows the particular goals of 'curriculum areas', is a profound self-esteem and a healthy, happy, strong self-image.

The Montessori classroom is prepared to help children accomplish their goals in their own manner, whether we call it work or play. Gradually the children reveal qualities for which they are not usually given credit, such as intense concentration and surprising attention span; exactness and precise movement; a sense of order; maximum effort even by very little ones; self discipline and respect for others; peacefulness and kindness; and an obvious joy in 'work'. The classroom is a prepared environment designed to support the child's need for purposeful activity. It is a children's house: the furniture is easily moved, pictures are hung at a child's eye-level, plants are easily watered by children. The sink is not a toy, but a real, child-sized sink. There are many carefully designed materials to meet the child's natural interest. The atmosphere is positive, supportive and non-competitive. The Infant / Toddler materials may look simple, but they are precisely designed, based on years of observation, experiment and study…

3D Object Fitting Exercise

By eight or nine months, an infant can explore putting a wooden egg in a cup and taking it out again. Putting a ball in a cup is a new experience, because the child has to turn over the cup to remove the ball. Putting a cube in a box is even more challenging because it is necessary to line up the corners of the box and cube for success.

Practical Life

When children come into the world, their first function is to adapt to their environment so that they may become a member of the human group to which they uniquely belong. The mechanism by which this occurs is one of absorption of all the elements surrounding them, obeying vital inner directives common to all children.

The first elements to be perceived and absorbed into the child's very being are the numerous levels of order prevailing in their home. The daily activities undertaken by adults in establishing, maintaining and embellishing the living environment; the care of others and the care of self; the ceremony and ritual of hospitality; these are all intensely fascinating to the child because they are aesthetic, logical and understandable. The quotidian rites of everyday existence are comforting and provide a security necessary for the child's development.

The Exercises of Practical Life are classified under the headings of Preliminary Exercises, Care of the Environment, Care of the Person, Grace and Courtesy, and Movement. There are materials for each of these areas adapted to the children's size, interests and capabilities. Fundamentally, these exercises are the same all over the world, but distinct in their expression in different societies since they reflect the domestic life of the particular culture where the Montessori environment is established.

The Exercises of Practical Life, which are the foundation of a Montessori environment, provide a sane and wholesome range of activities which allow the children to develop control and coordination of movement, awareness of their environment, orderly thought patterns, independent work habits, responsibility, and many other human characteristics which can only be attained by spontaneous, purposeful work.

Sensorial

The Sensorial Materials have been given many names: Materialized Abstractions, Keys to the Universe, Paths to Culture… These multiple denominations are perhaps indicative of the enthusiasm the materials evoke in people who know them well. They are deceptively simple in appearance and totally satisfying to the developing child.

The reason for the success and popularity of these materials is that they allow the children to undertake such activities as all children undertake, spontaneously. Given the opportunity, with or without specialized materials, children will sort things by size, shape, color, touch, sound, temperature and weight. They will grade from dark to light, and from large to small. The Montessori Sensorial apparatus allows them to classify sensorial impression in an organized, orderly and scientific manner as well as they allow for individual work and for repetition.

The Sensorial Materials are mathematically graded and limited in both scope and quantity; they isolate one quality only, keeping the remaining characteristics identical. This makes it possible for the children to abstract the concept made concrete in each piece of material, to name it, and then to apply it to the environment. Moreover, they have a built in control of error. Thanks to this control of error, the children acquire the habit of working independently, unafraid of making mistakes, becoming comfortable with the fact that errors are essential to the process of learning. And, incidentally, this establishes a tendency towards intellectual honesty.

The Pink Tower

This series of cubes develops visual discrimination of size in 3 dimensions. Exploration with this material prepares the child for mathematical concepts in the decimal system, geometry and volume. MONTESSORI

Language

Visitors came from all over the world to see Maria Montessori's "miracle children," the children in her first Casa dei Bambini in Rome. The children of illiterate families had began to write and to read spontaneously after working with very simple materials: the Sandpaper Letters - that gave them the shape of the letters; the Movable Alphabet - that allowed them to arrange these letters to form words; and the Metal Insets - that made it possible for the children to control a writing instrument… thus, the importance of the Montessori Language Materials.

The Language Materials have some inherent elements in common with the Sensorial Materials. Mostly it is their simplicity and the fact that they provide keys for the children to discover something that is beyond what lies on the surface. When children first come to the Montessori environment, usually around three years of age, their spoken language is developed, their vocabulary is quite extensive and their grammatical structures of speech are well established. They have a boundless capacity to expand and enrich their language and, as a natural consequence, the desire to write and read.

The educator, who is aware of language as a vital human expression, knows that language is not something taught by another, but something created by the children themselves. It is the educator's task to facilitate the process of creation by providing rich, precise and abundant language for the children. The Montessori Language Materials become significant for the child because their function is to isolate certain universal elements, common to all languages. The children learn, for example, that all words are composed of sounds that can be made visible with written signs; in all languages, different words have different functions and sentences have structures that make the action the nucleus of the sentence.

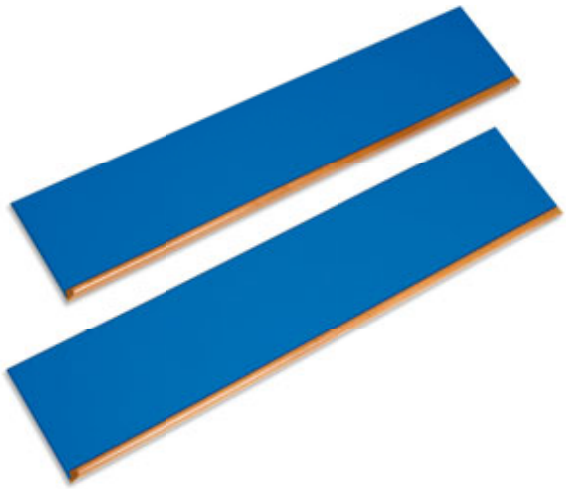

There is little to be taught on the part of the educator, yet there is unlimited scope for exploration on the part of the children. The Montessori Language Materials provide the keys to the fascinating world of language and are highly effective in their simplicity.

The Metal Insets

Use of this material strengthens the pincer grip and coordinates the necessary wrist movement for writing. The exercises also advance proficiency in lightness of touch and evenness of pressure through drawing activities. The Metal Insets invite unlimited geometric design possibilities.

Grammar Symbol Tiles

The Grammar Symbol Tiles enable a child to learn the grammar symbols in a very dynamic and physical way. Just like in a written sentence, the verb has a central role and all the other symbols are laid in a circle around it. As one child reads a sentence, another child leaps from symbol to symbol indicating the various parts of speech of the sentence. The diameter of the verb is 50 cm.

Item Number: 010750

Grammar Sense Game: Set 1

The Grammar Sense Game helps the child internalize a sense of the functions of the parts of speech. Children choose words randomly and place them into a sentence structure template based on their function. The sentences created are grammatically correct, but semantically nonsensical. It is great fun for the children. Includes: 1 base block, 4 paddle cards, 2 control charts, 1 flow chart, 84 word cards, instructions and a wooden box with lid. Designed by Mark Powell.

Mathematics

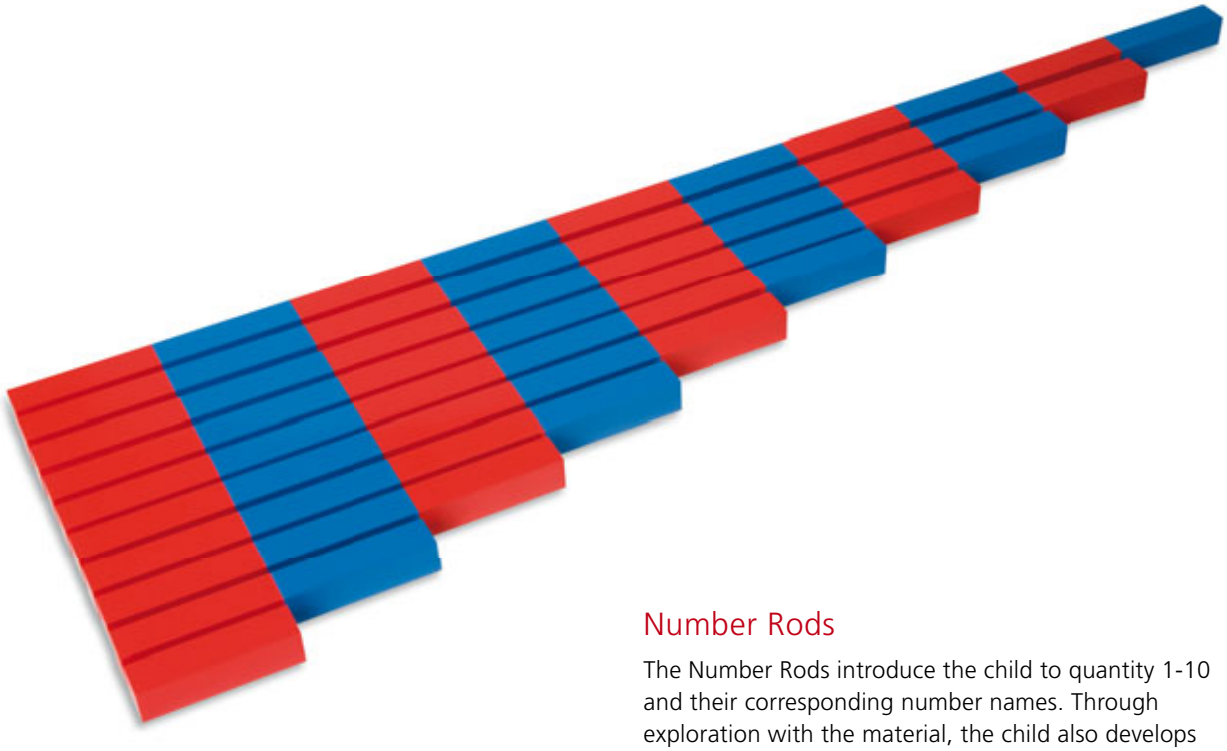

Of all the Montessori apparatus, the Math Materials are the most glamorous. They are beautiful, showy, and in their simplicity, supremely intelligent. They give children a sensorial experience of the abstraction that is mathematics, allowing them to store concepts so that when the time comes to deal exclusively in abstract terms, the understanding is already there. In a word, they are magical.

Before working with the Math Materials, the children are well prepared. The Exercises of Practical Life have given them the opportunity to develop logical and sequential thought patterns. The logical order of the Practical Life activities is complimented by the mathematical order inherent in the Sensorial Materials. These materials allow the children to work with the quantities 1-10 in several different dimensions and then with using the Math Materials, they are given their numerical value.

The Montessori Materials offer a clear example of indirect preparation, a principle that is rooted in the child's natural manner of learning. Each piece of material isolates one concept, and these isolated concepts integrate to form the basis for a further step in the development of the child's mathematical understanding.

Another area is that of indirect preparation. In this series of exercises, the children are presented with the four operations of Math in concrete form. When performing addition, subtraction, multiplication and division, they literally carry and borrow and change the quantities involved. As they put them together and take them apart, they perceive unconsciously the interplay of the numbers, which prepares them later to explore and memorize the tables with another series of exercises that again, isolate the particularities of each operation.

Through all this, the children will consciously pursue the exploration of mathematics in a manner appropriate to the characteristics of their age. All their work done previously has prepared them to master the skills of mathematics, and in the end the child's brilliant, adventurous mind can take off to explore the untold reaches of the mathematical sciences.

Number Rods

The Number Rods introduce the child to quantity 1-10 and their corresponding number names. Through exploration with the material, the child also develops concepts in sequence of number, combinations of 10 and basic arithmetic. The material consists of 10 wooden rods, divided into units by alternating colors of red and blue, progressing in 10 equal steps from 10 cm to 1 meter.

Biology

In the first three years of life, children have absorbed a limitless wealth of impressions, taking in all the elements of the world around them. Among these are a multitude of animals, plants, trees, and flowers – an infinite variety of growing things…

It is tremendously important to provide a mass of information to stimulate the children's interest in nature. A few simple keys will suffice to animate their inherent love of the natural world around them. With this information, this inherent love is transformed into their innate 'need to know' and 'understand it all'.

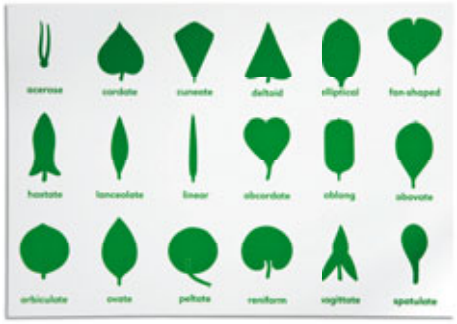

Once again, the child is given the names and the opportunity for sensorial exploration, which is ultimately organized through the Montessori Biology Materials. These materials provide them with the names of the animals and their parts, the basic leaf shapes, parts of the leaves, parts of the plants, parts of the flower and so on to help classify and refine the child's perception, and in turn, this creates the foundation for scientific knowledge to be acquired in the years to come.

Botany Cabinet

Using the Botany Cabinet, the child learns the shapes and names of leaves by tracing their borders and matching them to those in the natural environment. The Botany Cabinet consists of: a beech plywood cabinet with 3 drawers and 18 leaf-shape insets and frames. 49 x 34 x 16 cm.

Geography

With the Geography Materials, the child is given the facts of his physical world – that it is a sphere, that this sphere is composed of land masses and bodies of water, that these have different forms and that these forms have names.

The child at this age is also in a sensitive period for order, and the Geography Materials provide him with the opportunity for exploring the many levels of order established through the ages as we perceived and classified our earth – the countries, provinces, states - each with their own particular shapes, intriguing names, their capitals and their flags.

The child at this time is in the plane of intellectual development – the time of asking why, when, where, of all things. The facts learned and absorbed through this sensorial exploration provide a solid foundation for him to rediscover that which he already knows, and to further integrate it into his life. He can grasp and understand the characteristics of the land and the water, can begin to understand human affairs past and present that evolved, and is becoming aware of man's dependency on, and responsibility for, the habitat he shares with a myriad of other forms of life.

Globe Of Land And Water

With the Globe Of Land And Water, the child gets a sensorial impression of land and water. The globe has a sand surface representing land and a smooth surface representing water. The wooden base holds the globe at a 23° angle, the same as the earth's axis in relation to the sun.

The Clock Exercise

The Clock Exercise introduces the concept of time. It develops visual perception as well as language. Time is presented as 4 segments: the whole hour, a quarter past the hour, half past the hour and a quarter to the hour. Each of the individual 'faces' is a wooden tablet with the time shown both in the hands position and with the name written at the bottom of the tablet. The working stands have a slot for holding the tablet while at the same time, hiding the printed words on the bottom. The separate labels can be set on the stand in front of the 'face' as the child names the time. The faces and labels are printed in 4 colors for coding and separating the exercises. Includes: 48 face tablets, 48 label tablets, 2 working stands, a wooden box with compartments and instructions.

Includes: 1 clock (37 x 31 x 10 cm) with a compartment for storing the clock faces, 4 interchangeable clock faces, 2 removable clock hands, 1 sundial pointer, 1 compass, 1 whiteboard marker, and instructions.

Furniture

For over 80 years, Nienhuis has been recognized as a leading manufacturer of high-quality Montessori apparatus and furniture worldwide. In particular, we have consistently focused our vision on producing furniture made of only the finest woods. We also have taken care that our design is not only perfectly suitable for the children and the needs of the classroom, but also considers our responsibility for the environment as a whole.

With the purchase of Nienhuis by The Heutink Group in 2007, many doors were opened. Not only did we become a member of a high quality, well known, prominent group of companies focused on education, but we were also given access to the specialized companies within this network. Our first collaboration was with Kids-F – a first-rate furniture company. Our teams joined forces and designed a fresh, full line of Montessori furniture and cabinets.

Our chairs and tables were redesigned to comply with the EN 1729 European Standard, which is focused on optimum comfort and posture for the children. The frames and seats of the chairs are made of solid beech wood; the backs are formed of top-quality beech plywood. To facilitate cleaning and long-term durability, the non-toxic finishes are double-coated lacquer and there is a scratch-resistant coating applied to the tabletops.

Our Material Cabinets are available in two heights – 69 and 101 cm – and there are several styles to choose from. In addition to shelving-only configurations, there are also Material Cabinets available with wooden shelves and Gratnells Trays. This type of storage is effective, efficient and looks good too!

For 2015, we introduce two new collections...

Our Infant / Toddler range – Based upon designs from AMI trained A to I experts, this series will for certain enhance your Montessori classroom. Here you will find a wide array of chairs, tables, benches, stools and shelving, all specially crafted for the smaller child. Our entire Infant / Toddler line is made from birch wood and the finishes are double coated with non-toxic lacquer for long-term durability.

The DeZein Furniture collection – The style of this collection is based on flowing curves, organic forms and natural colors. Each piece showcases the beauty of raw beech wood for a look that is naturally beautiful. The DeZein furniture line is fully sustainable, and is made from the highest quality FSC certified beech wood with safe, non-toxic materials and finishes.

We are confident that once again you will be pleased with our most recent additions...

Infant / Toddler Furniture

This new series of furniture will for certain enhance your Montessori classroom. Although many of the same concepts used in designing furniture for the older child's environment apply in an Infant / Toddler environment, due to the size and developmental age of these young children there are a number of important factors that must be considered. One of the key concepts in this environment is learning to be independent. Rather than using the traditional 'high' chairs, which rely on adult intervention, the furniture is lower in height and smaller in size. Take for example the Weaning Table and Chair, these pieces are specifically designed for an infant as young as 6 months. They are low to the ground and the seat of the chair is deeper to allow the infant to sit with crossed legs further enhancing their stability. The Infant shelves are open, and low to the ground with only a top and bottom shelf. This allows both the infant and the teacher to see through the shelves while maintaining a safe barrier. The Toddler tables and chairs stand a bit higher, and the Toddler shelving has a center shelf for additional material storage. Our Infant / Toddler line of furniture is made from birch wood and the finishes are double-coated lacquer to facilitate cleaning and for long-term durability.

El Niño-El Secreto De La Infancia

Maria Montessori. Educar al nino no es trasmitirle cultura sino facilitarle el hallazgo de su propio yo, con todas las riquezas de esa maravilla que es su mundo interior. La etapa más propicia para realizar esta tarea son los primeros años de la vida del pequeño. Este fue el descubrimiento de la gran educadora Maria Montessori, que introdujo la revolución pedagógica más importante del siglo XX. El objetivo de esta forma de enseñanza es sin duda lograr el desarrollo armónico de un ser humano más completo y dinámico, pero a partir del principio mismo de su existencia: los primeros años de la infancia. El método Montessori tiene como factores centrales de su pedagogía la importancia decisiva del ambiente en que el niño crece y se descubre a si mismo en medio de su mundo, y el respeto absoluto a la personalidad del educando. Los "Milagros" logrados por la autora del método han impresionado a todos los que de alguna manera intervienen en la educación de los infantes y los niños, y su influencia se ha extendido ya a todos los países del mundo. Por esta razón El Niño, el secreto de la infancia, es un libro para el profesionales de la educación, así como para los padres de familia.

Maria Montessori Sails To America

Maria Montessori. During her first voyage to America at the end of 1913, Montessori kept a diary in which she dwelled on the major changes that had taken place in her life in that year and looked forward to what her visit to America might have in store for her and her work. Maria Montessori demonstrates her powers of observation and describes life on board with relish and wit. The diary also gives a rare insight into her budding relationship with her adolescent son Mario, who had come to live with her earlier that year. Translated and introduced by Carolina Montessori, her great-granddaughter, this small book is an absolute must-have for anyone interested in Montessori's life and career. This is the first time that Maria Montessori's thoughts, feelings and impressions, written down by herself, are being published.

The 1913 Rome Lectures

Maria Montessori. Maria Montessori organized the 1913 training course in Rome in response to many requests, from all over the world, but particularly the United States. It is the first course that was especially devised to provide international students to benefit from a bilingual curriculum. Whilst Montessori obviously delivered her lectures in Italian, simultaneous English translation was offered by two students: Zoe Bateman, who went on to become secretary of the Montessori Educational Association (USA) founded by parents impressed by Montessori's work Miss George had started, and Emily Greenman, who was one of the first to express interest in taking a course with Dr. Montessori, if she were to offer that in the English language. The lectures on this 1913 course testify to Maria Montessori's passion as a thinker on human development. They show the depth of her background as a doctor of medicine, anthropologist, philosopher and pedagogue giving an enthralling insight into how she was influenced by her time, where she adopted new and traditional ideas as an inspiration and how she explored new directions.
